OCTOBER 2008
$3.95

This review by David Gadd appeared as shown in "Gadd's Sixpack," the regular beer column in "The Tasting Panel," magazine. See page 42 of the Oct. 2008 issue.

Ayinger Celebrator Black as a night alone in the woods. The obscure, nocturnal flavors are brightened somewhat by a thread of acidity that leads the way out of the forest, by way of chocolate frosting and malt ball flavors. As dense, mysterious and delicious as a Grimm fairytale.
